

First ConnectedLiving Class Graduates

Thirty (30) residents of Greensboro Housing Authority's Hall Towers and Stoneridge became the first ConnectedLiving graduates at the January 3rd and 4th ceremonies held at each senior community. Technology has become essential to the senior living industry, and the ConnectedLiving program provides training, a user-friendly platform and interactive activities and learning opportunities for residents. The beginners' class helped seniors become familiar with keyboards, social media and various computer programs and games. With graduation coming right after Christmas, many residents received laptops as gifts from their families and others purchased them for themselves.

"It is great learning things I didn't know before," said Janice Brown, a Hall Towers resident, "I am much more confident navigating through the Internet."

Seventeen graduates plan to further their computer skills and have enrolled in advanced classes that are scheduled in their communities. Ten residents have enrolled in the next beginners' class.
